

Your best buyer sent a PO.

Someone retyped it.

Now line 14 is the wrong part.

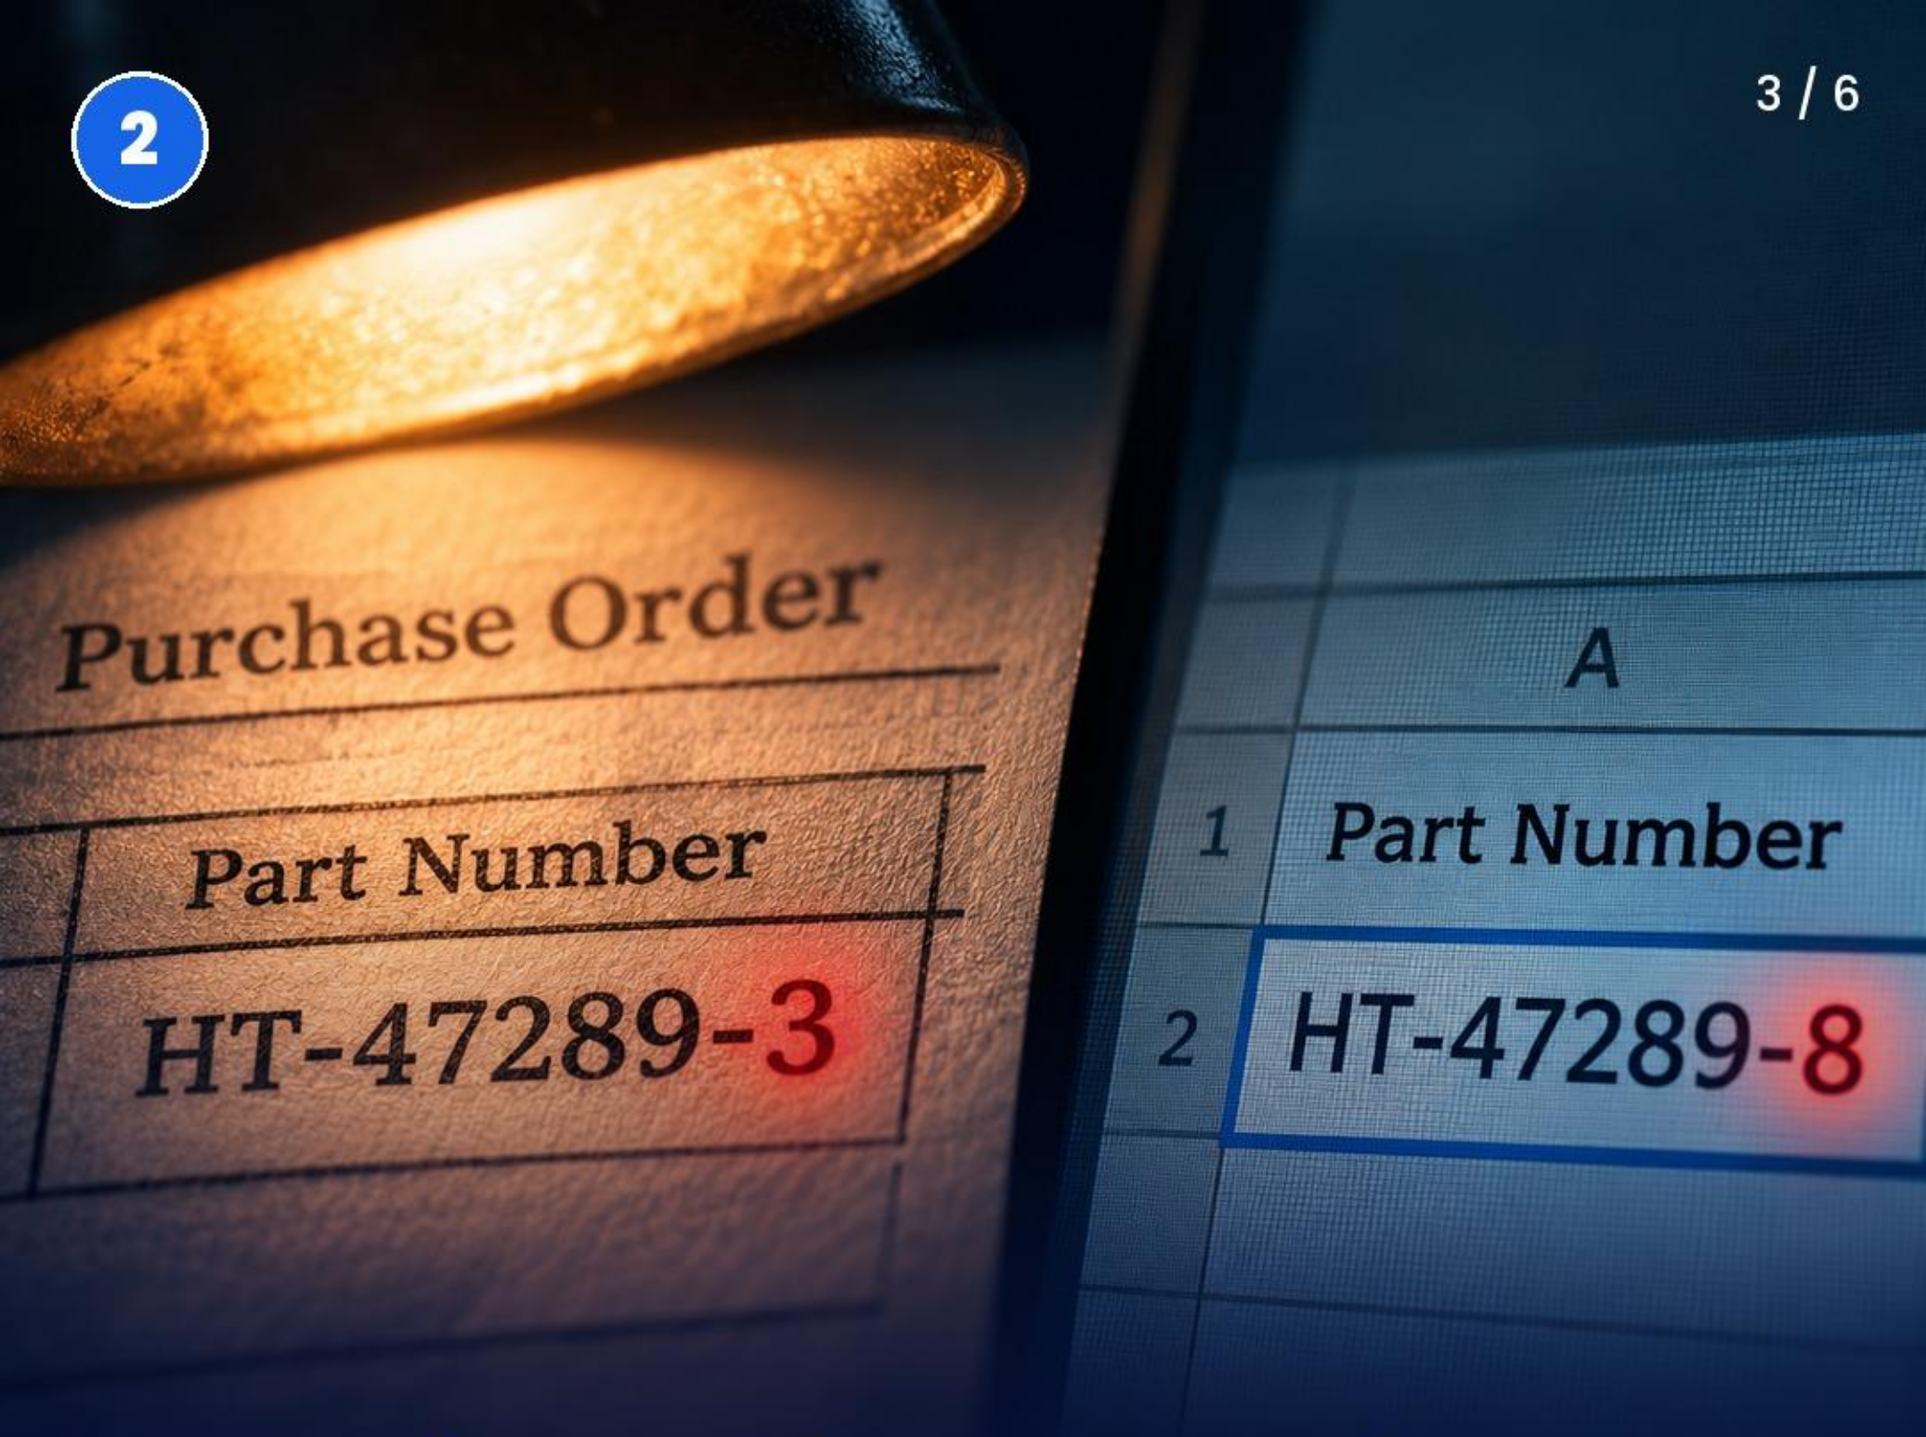

1

It lands at 4:58 on Friday

Forty lines. One tired rep. Two screens. A promise to ship Monday.

2

Retyping adds a second author

Every digit gets typed again. One swapped digit and a different part is on the pallet.

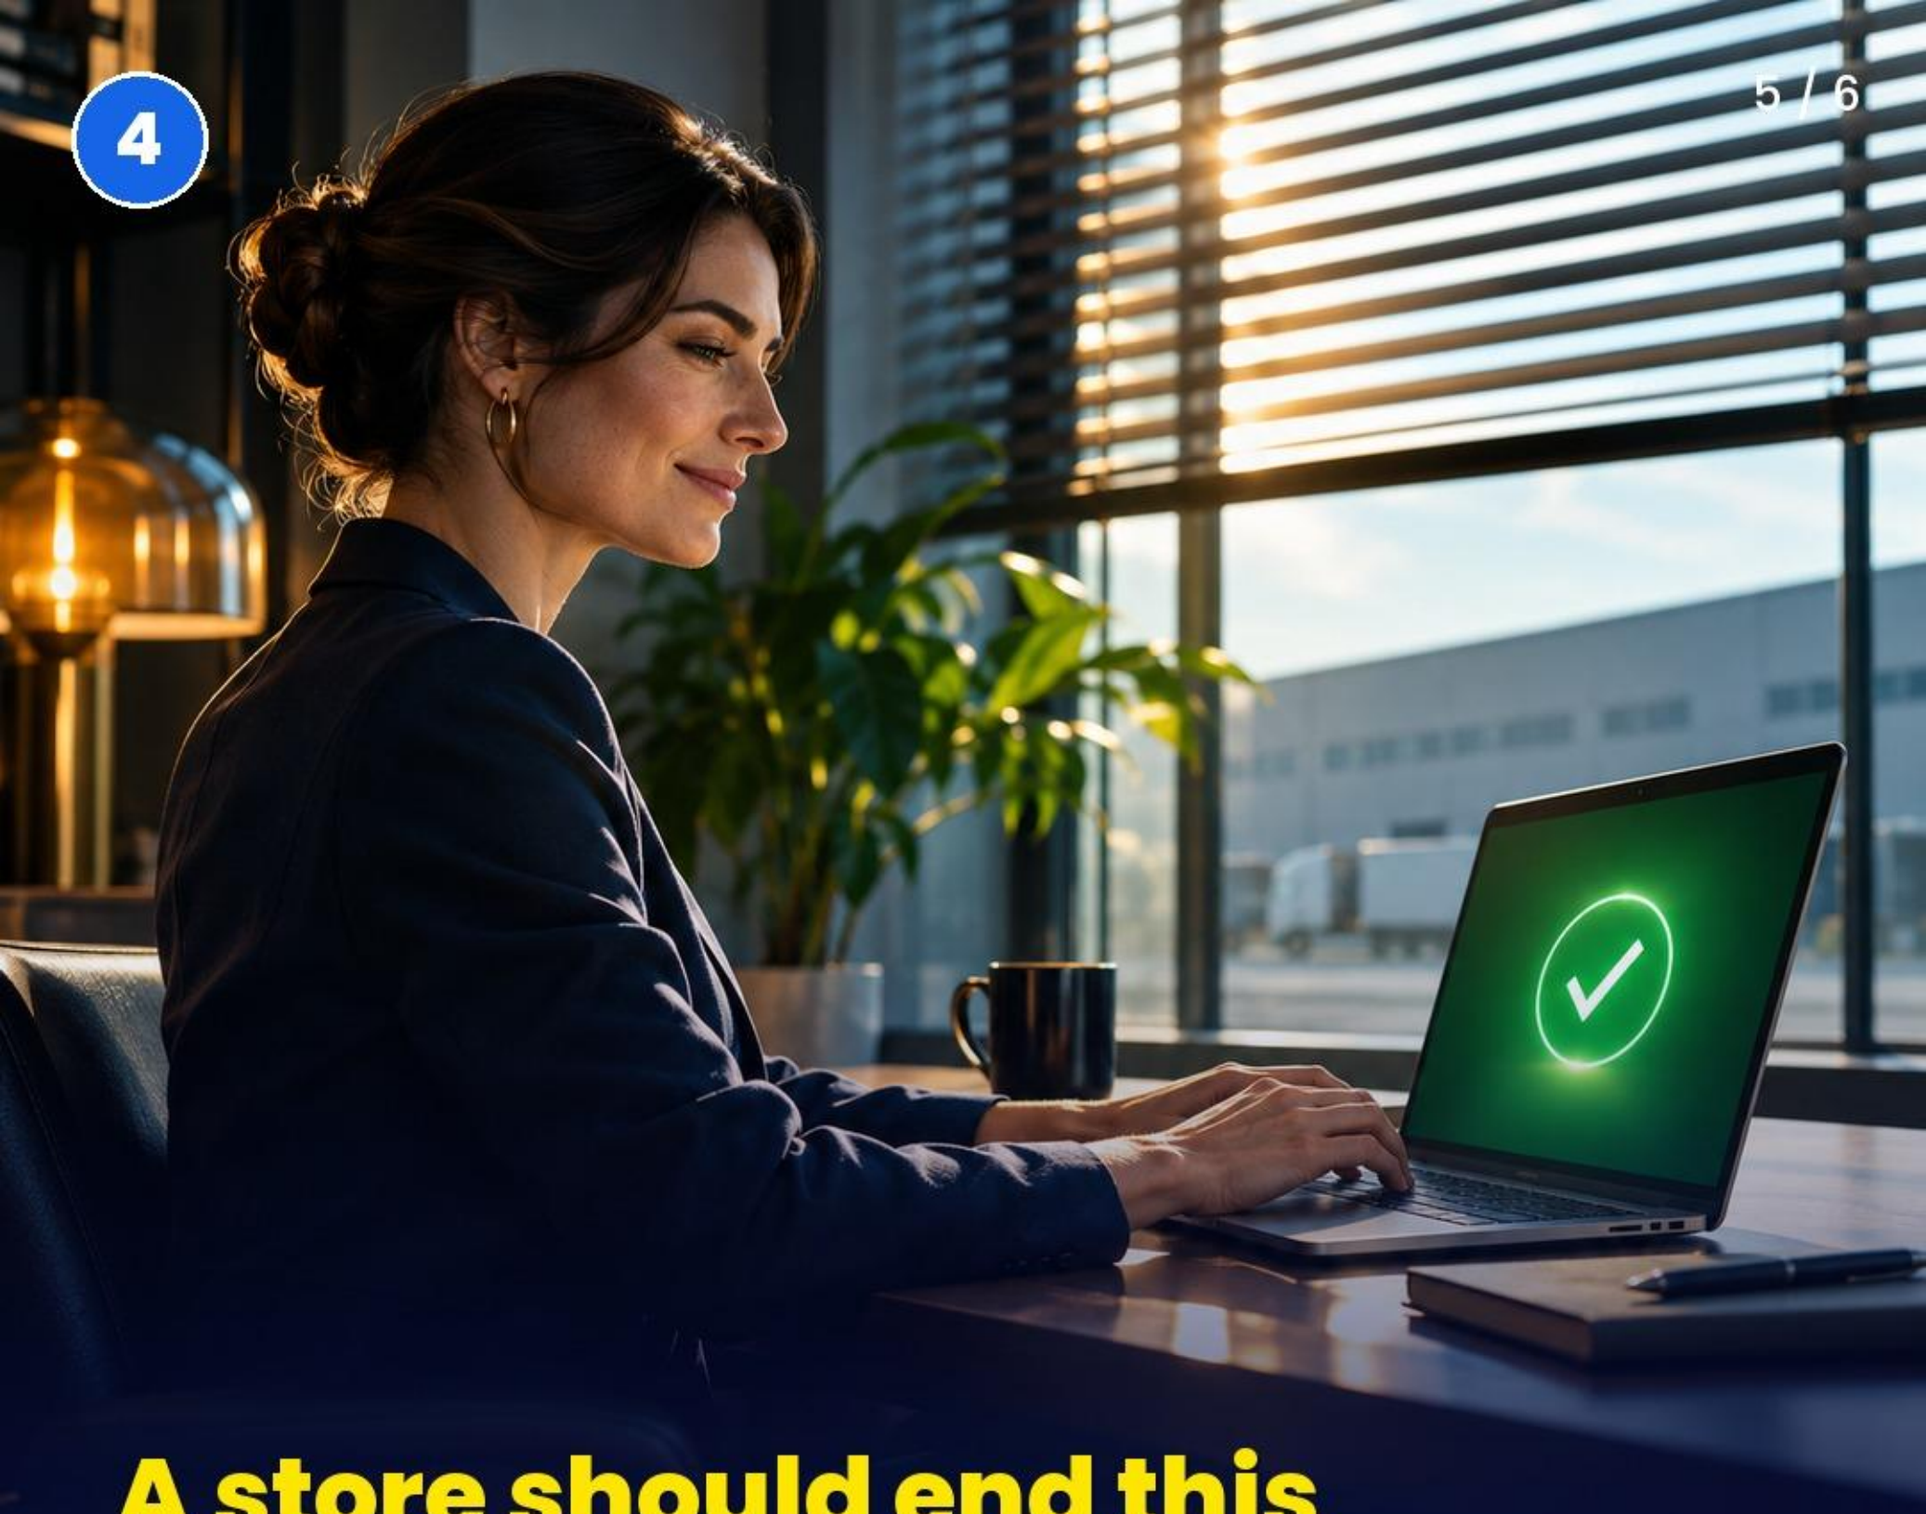

3

The buyer finds out last

The box opens Tuesday at their dock. The invoice is already out. Trust takes the hit.

4

A store should end this

When buyers key their own order, they own the typo.
Nobody on your team inherits the blame.

5

Count them this week

Tally every PO that arrives as a file. Each one is a chance to retype.
